Something Happened.

(Original.)

Bob Southwick was adventuring on the street, a victim of chance. He was twenty-three years old, possessed a fortune but was miserable. The trouble with him was that he had nothing to interest him. He was a very ordinary man.

Something did happen, indeed, something remarkable happened—very remarkable. A young girl, pretty and prettily dressed, came out of an office building looking very much perplexed. She turned northward, walked rapidly for a dozen steps, stopped, turned and walked southward for an equal distance, stopped again and muttered to herself, but loud enough for Bob, of whose presence she was unconscious, to hear:

"What in the world shall I do?"

Bob stepped up to her, raised his hat politely and said:

"Can I be of service to you? You seem to be in a quandary about something."

The girl became suddenly conscious that a young man was standing deferentially before her and had asked her a question. She suddenly replied to a question, "What time is it?"

Bob took out his watch and told her that it was a quarter to 12 o'clock.

"Oh, my goodness gracious!"

"Please tell me," he said, "what's your trouble. I may be able to help you."

"You can't."

"Do you want anything?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"I want a husband."

"Pshaw!" exclaimed the young man, then, after a pause, "Will I do?"

The girl kept her brows, bit her lip and finally said that he would.

"All right, I'll look into the matter."

"There is no time. I must be married before the clock strikes 12."

"But you can surely tell me why this thing must be so sudden."

"It's too long a story."

Just then a man came out of the building before which they stood, approached the young lady and said:

"The 12's up. It's ten minutes to 12."

"This gentleman," she said, meaning Bob, "is thinking of—"

"There's no time for thinking. We must be acting," said the man. "If I hadn't a wife and family, I'd help you out."

"If you've got to have a husband right off," said Bob resolutely, "I'm your man."

"All right," said the other. "I'm a lawyer. I'll see that you are well paid for what you do and no trouble. Come along."

He hurried the couple around the corner to the office of a justice of the peace. The justice was coming out on his way to lunch.

"Marry this couple," said the lawyer, "and do it quick."

"You guarantee it's all right?"

"Certainly."

"The names?"

"Mine is Robert Blair Southwick."

"Your name, please."

"Ella Ruth Gurney."

"One minute of 12," remarked the lawyer, looking at his watch and showing it back in his pocket excitedly. "Go ahead, judge, and be quick about it."

A brief ceremony was performed, and a moment after the couple had been pronounced husband and wife the clock struck 12. The bride fell limp into a chair and fainted herself vigorously.

"Now make out a certificate," said the lawyer to the justice, "stating that you married these two before 12 o'clock this day," then, turning to Bob, "if you will accompany me and Miss Gurney—"

"Mrs. Southwick, you mean."

"Bob pardon me to my office we will be happy to make this marriage worth your while, and I will guarantee you a divorce without trouble or remuneration."

"Must that be got right off?" asked Bob. "There's been hurry enough about getting into the thing. I would like a little time about getting out of it."

The lawyer wiped the perspiration from his forehead and said more deliberately:

"No hurry about that, I assure you. Perhaps I may as well explain briefly the occasion for this hurried marriage, and we can all meet to arrange further plans later. Miss Gurney—"

"Mrs. Southwick, please."

"Bob pardon me—Mrs. Southwick—returned today from a long trip in foreign lands, having been delayed on the voyage home. A year ago her uncle died leaving a will bequeathing her his fortune on condition that she marry his son, Elmer Gurney, on or before 12 o'clock today. If Elmer Gurney refused or died she would inherit any way if married on or before the said date. This was to secure a succession. Gurney died a week ago."

"Thank you," said Bob. "I'll see you later about the divorce." Then to the lady he said, "May I be permitted to call, Mrs. Southwick?"

"I shall be very happy."

"Will this evening at 8 be convenient?"

"If all."

"Your address, please."

"Washington place—No. 64."

"Good day," raising his hat. "Pleased to have met you."

For the next time the absurdity of the situation occurred to the girl, and she laughed. "Good day, much obliged."

"Don't mention it."

There was no divorce. Bob Southwick, now having a wife to "give troth" with him, is not so bored as formerly.

FORM ONE MORE HABIT.

You have probably not yet formed enough "habits." It is likely that you would find the "advertising habit" a dividend paying one—and one that would never lure you far away from the best thrift-creed ever devised.

A habit is usually formed through yielding to natural inclination. The advertising habit will have to be cultivated—perhaps against present inclination, and through an effort of will.

You are not in the habit of saying "Impossible," are you?
